Bake and decorate an eerie eyeball cake for Halloween, birthday or fun science parties. This cake is very simple to make. Although it seems eye-catching, no special pans or materials are required for decorating a cake. Choose your favorite cake mix. The white cake matches the cream, but you can add red food coloring to a mixture to make a bloody eyeball, yes, that sucks, but that's the point, isn't it? Preheat your oven (350°F). Spray glass or metal mixing bowl with 2-000 qt bowl with no gelling cooking spray. Sprinkle the pan with flour. Shake off any excess. Bake the cake. It's going to take as long as if you're winning a bun cake... probably about 35 minutes. Let the cake cool completely. Remove the cake from the bowl and place it on a plate. If the cake sticks, you can use a rubber spatula or butter knife to help release it. If you want perfectly smooth eyeball, use a white gloss that is thinner and a set with a glossy finish. Draw an eye with blue or cream. You can use a glass to print a round shape in the white cream. Fill the pupil of the eye with black cream or use a circle made of construction paper. I used a mini-rees shell. Use the red gel cream to track blood vessels in white on the eye. Bon appetit! I've always been a on Valentine's Day - I hate it. I also burst into tears when people sang Happy Birthday to me as a child. For me, what comes down to every semblance of violent enthusiasm makes me desperately, terribly awkward. Valentine's Day is a holiday that makes me feel the #awkward. Relationships are wonderful and enriching, but let's face it - they can also be difficult, and sometimes feelings are complicated. Your S.O. may be the light of your life, but they can also drive you completely crazy. Valentine's Day puts a tight straitjacket on every emotional mess and paints a big smile on everyone's face for 24 Is it weird for someone else? To see if I was completely alone, I took a cabinet survey and asked what R29 staff secretly wanted me to tell their on Valentine's Day. To my relief, none of the answers that came back will likely be on the Hallmark card soon (I'm not the only B-Day courgeon in the world!). Here are ten things we really want to say to our S.O.S. on Valentine's Day. Since we are not completely heartless, we will serve them on delicious cakes to soften the blow. Hit.
